At the last meeting of the Women's Studies Advisory Committee (February 6, 1975), it was requested that I write to all instructors as follows:

The Committee feels that it would be a good idea for Douglas College to offer some sort of a program for the community as a contribution to International Women's Year. As you know many community organizations are doing something along these lines. The date we have in mind would be the latter part of May 1975. Could you ask your students for any suggestions as to what the nature of such a program could be. It may, for example, take the form of a workshop, workshops, public speakers, films, but these are in no way the only things we can do.

I am requested to prepare a draft proposal for the Dean of Curriculum within two weeks, so I look forward to hearing scintillating and practical ideas as soon as possible.

Thanks.
